USSR: Khrushchev probably will use his 30 June trip to East Germany to counter President Kennedy's visit to West Berlin and West Germany and to restate Soviet views on the eve of the Sino-Soviet encounter and the three-power nuclear test talks in Moscow.

Although the precise cast of Khrushchev's speeches undoubtedly will be influenced by his interpretation of the President's remarks, it seems likely that the Soviet premier will elaborate on his initial response to President Kennedy's 10 June speech on US-Soviet relations and the cold war. Khrushchev may believe that an ostensibly constructive approach to East-West relations, stressing the value of negotiations to ease tensions, will provide his strongest platform for dealing with the Chinese.

While it seems unlikely that Khrushchev will announce any major innovations in Soviet positions on a German peace treaty and a Berlin settlement, it is possible that he will expand his formula for United Nations participation in new West Berlin arrangements and indicate Soviet readiness to return to four-power negotiations on these issues. He may calculate that a call for a new foreign ministers' conference, or even a summit meeting, will complicate Western discussions on the creation of a NATO nuclear force.

NOTES

USSR: Moscow expects that the forthcoming test-ban talks in the Soviet capital will be "serious and confidential," and without daily press briefings. In so stating to a US Embassy official, the Soviet Foreign Ministry's press chief noted that the USSR will probably not accede to visa requests it is already receiving from journalists. Moscow's representative at the talks has not yet been designated, but First Deputy Foreign Minister Kuznetsov recently hinted that Deputy Foreign Minister Zorin would be nominated.

Cuba-USSR: High-altitude photography reveals that the Santa Lucia SAM site on the northern coast of Pinar del Rio Province in western Cuba was evacuated [redacted]. If this site is being relocated, it would be the sixth relocation of a SAM site in Cuba. The [redacted] relocation of the Bahia Honda SAM site to its new location at Majana and the evacuation of the Santa Lucia site leave approximately 75 miles of the northern coast of Pinar del Rio Province unprotected by surface-to-air missile defenses.

[redacted]

Uruguay-Cuba: Uruguay will supply 7,500 to 15,000 tons of rice to Cuba under a contract signed by private Uruguayan rice producers and a Cuban trade mission on 21 June. Payment will be in convertible currencies. While Uruguay is not obligated to purchase Cuban sugar on a reciprocal basis, some arrangement involving a substantial amount of sugar may yet be worked out.
